

2020 Vision: A Letter to Me, Myself, and I

Dear Kelly,

By the time you read this, another year will have passed. You will have encountered obstacles, endured pain/loss/disappointment, and done it all with a spirit dipped in passion. You did it! You kept moving forward though fatigued in mind, body, and spirit.

You are grace. You are energy. You are beauty inside and out. You are perfectly flawed. When you fell, you pushed up and out, asking and accepting assistance.

You let yourself love and be loved – acknowledging the fear of rejection and imperfection – trusting that your heart was stronger than you gave it credit for.

You admitted prejudices and ignorance, choosing knowledge and open discourse to grow in truth. You met spirit siblings, mentors for life, and friends who challenged you.

You walked your journey with your head held high, to observe and experience all that surrounds. Confidence navigated your path, coloring your view in clarity.

Live in the present as you move forward, walking on with the spirits of those who came before.

Sincerely,

Me
